THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN (Covenanter)

CHURCH BELIEVES THAT—

The Bible is God's Word and the complete guide of life.

The Lord Jesus Christ is both God and man in one person.

Christ, by His blood, cleanses us from all sin and provides a place in Heaven for all eternity.

The believer has perfect security in Jesus Christ.

The believer, born of the Spirit, has been crucified with Christ and although he does sin—consciously or unconsciously—his desire is to live a perfect life and he should keep this ideal constantly before him.

The unbeliever is now under the wrath of God and is awaiting death and the judgment, and should therefore turn to God with his whole heart and ask forgiveness and life through Christ.

Since "all authority in Heaven and earth has been given to Christ" and since the Bible is our guide-book, we should study the Bible carefully to learn what He wants us to be and do in every department of life—as individuals, families, churches and nations; and that He demands of His people that they seek to teach others this ideal.

As Individuals, we should engage in daily Bible study and prayer and should let Christ live in us. We should agree (covenant) with Christ to enter into no organization or relation where He is left out and should be content to stand outside with our Master until the way is open for Him to enter in to take charge.

As families, we agree (covenant) with Christ to make Him the constant guest in the home; to maintain the family altar; and to be "kindly affectioned one toward another."

As a Church, inasmuch as God knows how and with what He desires to be worshipped, nothing should be used in worship except what He has authorized in His Word. He requires simplicity in worship in which all participate, and demands that we be His witnesses to all the world.

As a nation, Christ should be recognized as the Saviour and King, and we agree (covenant) that where the nation rejects Christ, we as Christians should not participate in political activities but should strive to open the way to have Him suitably acknowledged as its Head and bring the country to Christ.

As Christians, we should live the life separate from the world and maintain communion with Christ. We should enter no organization which denies Christ or the Bible and should strive to get others to believe this. We recognize that while it is necessary to live among ungodly men, we should not take part in their sins.

We believe, dear reader, that these great principles of life will appeal to you as worthy of every Christian's support, and we invite you to an earnest, prayerful consideration of them. We therefore solicit you to join us in maintaining and spreading these great truths of the Word of God; to help press the battle against sin in this community; and to spread loyalty to Christ throughout the world.
